Current Comment

By R. H. K.

The opinions (if any) expressed herein, are not necessarily those of The Campbell Press.

The weather man said this morning that a warm spell is headed this way. Well, that's to be expected. Personally, I could have used a bit of "warm" this a. m. as a chill breeze whistling through the kitchen window made my matutinal repast somewhat of an ordeal. But getting back to the prognostication of weather, just for ducks, and with a jealous eye on my amateur standing, I'll predict rain. My forecast is based solely on the fact that local cherries are ripe.

"Bringing 'em back alive" does not apply in kidnaping, a further review of the morning's news reveals. The latest outrage culminating in the death of the Cash lad in Florida was doubtless perpetrated by one of those amateurs I mentioned last week, for he not only caused the death of his victim, but was so badly frightened that he disappeared without his loot. There is little doubt in my mind that the G-men will get the kidnaper, and when they do—hanging is too good for him. But, if I may repeat a remark made in last week's effort, that will be small solace for the parents of the Cash boy.

The wage hour bill, it appears, will pass both houses with its fangs knocked out and a set of soft rubber plates gleaming sadly in their places: in other words, the 40 cent minimum will be "flexible." Where it would "lead to unemployment"—that it, where employers are not able to pay the minimum 40-cent an hour wage without serious loss to themselves and the consequent cessation of their businesses or industries—that same 40-cent an hour minimum can be overlooked and the employer, presumably, will set his own scale. It is interesting to note that objection to the bill in its original form was raised by Southern senators, whom we have come to regard, in the main, as New Deal supporters. Since the wage-hour bill is one of the more intelligent bits of legislation fostered by the administration, it is typical that the "boys" from the southern states refused to let it go "as is." Lawmakers from the blue grass and panhandle areas maintan that southern labor isn't worth as much as northern labor, and for that reason there should be a differential in wage scales north and south of the old "line" that seems destined to be the frontier of bitterness and dissesion in this nation forever. That the southern laborer is not worth as much as his northern brother is, of course, all poppycock. Where the southerner fails to produce in step with the northerner you will usually find him handicapped by lack of modern equipment, and with a mental handicap placed on him by the industrialist and agriculturist, whose attitude of "anything's too good for white trash" does little to promote a spirit of cooperation between the classes.

The southern senators' real reason for objecting to the 40-cent an hour minimum is not so much that they believe southern workmen inferior; it is because they purpose to keep in the good graces of the wealthy constituents back home—for the wealthy of the south have more to say in the direction of the vote than do the wealthy of the more vigorous and mentally alert north and west.

Some of you will probably think I've devoted a lot of space to a seemingly unimportant matter. How is all that going to affect us, you may ask. After all, California industry and agriculture already pays the minimum in most cases, and there is little reason to believe that wage scales here will be otherwise. Well, here's just one way it will affect us—continue to affect us: Texas canners can buy, pack, and put tomatoes in New York City cheaper than California canners can put them in their own warehouses! And they can do it simply because the agricultural and cannery workers are paid starvation wages in the "good old south." A strictly enforced minimum wage law would put canners of the south and west on an equal basis, and if you don't believe that would help California—and you—economically, you haven't given the situation much attention.

Vaughn Lloyd Was Member of Local Family

Vaughn L. Lloyd, who passed away suddenly last week Wednesday was a member of one of Campbell's well known families of a few years past, the late J. C. and Mrs. Anna Lloyd.

Lloyd was on a camping trip near Weaverville. He was for many years a motorman for the San Jose railroads, but on account of heart trouble he had taken a leave of absence when the transfer to buses was made by the company. On the advice of his physician he had rented his home on Cleveland avenue in Burbank and had gone on this outing.

Funeral rites were held in San Jose Saturday afternoon at the Curry and Gripenstraw parlors, and interment was in the Santa Clara City cemetery. Morning Light lodge I. O. O. F. of Campbell was in charge of the services, but the pall bearers were relatives.

Surviving relatives are his widow, Mrs. Bessie Lloyd; a daughter, Mrs. Lois Kingham; three sons, Wayne L., Loren A. and Elmer C. Lloyd; two grandchildren, Loren Alton and Joan Lloyd; his mother, Mrs. Anna Lloyd, two sisters, Mrs. Floy L. Morris and Mrs. Richard W. Saveker, and a brother, Dr. M. L. Loyd of San Francisco.

Born in Washington, Lloyd had lived the greater part of his 54 years here and in San Jose.

The Flag

By Franklin K. Lane

I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow.
I am whatever you make me, nothing more.
I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become.
I live a changing life, a life of moods and passions, of heartbreaks and tired muscles.
Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly.
Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically I play the coward.
Sometimes I am loud, garish, and full of that ego that blasts judgment.
But always, I am all that you hope to be, and have the courage to try for.
I am song and fear, struggle and panic, and ennobling hope.
I am the day's work of the weakest man, and the largest dream of the most daring.
I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and statute makers, soldier and dreadnought, drayman and street sweep, cook, counseler, and clerk.
I am the battle of yesterday and the mistake of tomorrow.
I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why.
I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution.
I am no more than what you believe me to be and I am all you believe I can be.
I am what you make me, nothing more.
I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, and pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My stars and my stripes are your dream and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts. For you are the makers of the flag and it is well that you glory in the making.

NEW SEAWAY PROPOSAL

Secretary Hull's St. Lawrence Plan Arouses Strong Opposition in Congress . . . Wallace Again Rebuffed

Hull's St. Lawrence Plan

PRESUMABLY by direction of the President, Secretary of State Hull submitted to Canada a new proposal for development of the St. Lawrence seaway, asking that it be considered as a basis for a new treaty which would be a revision and amplification of the treaty of 1932 that the senate refused to ratify in 1934. Under the terms of the Hull plan Canada would obtain without cost a completed St. Lawrence deep waterway, ready for power development, and also other valuable concessions. The United States would obtain the privilege of building the seaway at its own expense, increased power development at Niagara Falls, and the recognition by Canada of American sovereignty over Lake Michigan.

Secretary Hull

Immediate and vociferous opposition to the plan broke out in congress, both Democrats and Republicans characterizing it as a scheme to buy the support of the Dominion for a gigantic water power development planned by the New York state power authority.

From the State department leaked information that not even Canada was expected to approve the proposed treaty. Canadian officials have repeatedly doubted whether recovery from the depression would be promoted by spending millions on a waterway for which there is not sufficient commerce and for development of surplus water power for which there is no demand.

Hull's plan provides that the United States shall develop the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence river at an estimated cost of 400 million dollars. This was denounced by Senator Wagner of New York. Senator Copeland, also of New York, announced he was against the seaway project "1,000 per cent." He called it "an all-British canal."

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee having jurisdiction of treaties, said the new proposals would not have a chance of ratification unless materially modified.

Senators and representatives from the Middle West were especially aroused. Senator Clark of Missouri pointed out that the treaty would permit diversion of only 1,500 cubic feet of water per second into the Chicago drainage canal. He said the Mississippi river must receive more water than that from the canal in order to fill a nine-foot channel.

Representative Claude Parsons of Illinois was even more emphatic in disapproval. "This proposed treaty," he said, "is about the worst mistake Secretary Hull ever made. Under the terms of his proposal to set up an international commission for the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin, Canada would be given control over our all-American Lake Michigan.

"Furthermore, the treaty would prohibit any further diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago of more than 1,500 cubic feet per second. The Illinois and Mississippi rivers must have at least 5,000 c.f.s. to insure a dependable waterway."

Wallace Slapped Again

STERNLY chastising Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson for making assertions that were unwarranted and wholly unfounded, the United States Supreme court rejected the government's petition for a rehearing of the Kansas City stockyards rate case.

Twice before the court had rebuked Wallace in the stockyards case and had set aside his order fixing maximum rates which commission men might charge for services because, the court said, they had been denied a full, fair, and open hearing by Secretary Wallace.

Justice Hugo Black, who was the lone dissenter when the case was decided in April, ran true to form, again being the only member of the court to dissent.

New Food Act Passed

WITHOUT a record vote the house passed the new pure food and drug bill. The senate had passed a similar measure and the differences were to be reconciled in conference. The act brings drugs, therapeutic devices, and foods under regulation of the Department of Agriculture. It prohibits alteration or misbranding of cosmetics, 94 foods and drugs, requires adequate tests of products before they are placed on the market, provides for license restrictions to control bacterial contamination of foods, requires warning labels on habit-forming drugs, and provides for factory inspection.

Reform Bill Shelved

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT accepted the advice of congressional leaders and consented to the shelving of his bill for reorganization of the executive government. This was announced with the approval of the President by Senator Barkley. At the same time it was made known that the administration would attempt to get the measure through congress early in the 1939 session. Sen. Hiram Johnson of California said the opponents of the bill would be ready to resume their battle against it next year.

Tax Bill Unsigned But Law

FOR the first time since he entered the White House, President Roosevelt permitted an act of congress to become law without his signature. He took this course with the tax revision bill in order to emphasize his objection to "those unwise parts of the bill" which removed all but the skeleton of the undistributed profits tax and drastically modified the levies upon capital gains.

President Roosevelt

The President announced his action in a speech delivered to 148 mountain families of the New Deal-sponsored rehabilitation community of Arthurdale, W. Va., at the graduation exercises of 13 high school students. His words, however, were carried to the nation by radio networks.

"I call the definite attention of the American people," said Mr. Roosevelt, "to those unwise parts of the bill I have talked to you about today—one of them which may restore in the future certain forms of tax avoidance, and of concentrated investment power, which we had begun to end, and the other a definite abandonment of a principle of tax policy long ago accepted as part of our American system."

The President declared that he had no objection to removing any obstacles to little business which might be contained in the revenue laws but he reiterated the administration's determination not to allow the use of corporate forms to avoid what it considers legitimate tax burdens.

Mr. Roosevelt made plain that he hoped for a future revision of the revenue laws in line with the objectives he seeks. Such revisions, he said, should be designed to encourage new investment and the entry of private capital into new fields.

Big Fund for Highways

LEGISLATION authorizing new federal highway expenditures of $357,400,000 for the fiscal years 1940 and 1941 won final congressional approval when the senate adopted a conference report previously accepted by the house. Also authorized was the expenditure of $150,000,000 of old, unused appropriations.

Another Recovery Plan

ABANDONMENT of experiments by the government and adoption of an industrial program based on experience was advocated by Charles R. Hook, president of the National Association of Manufacturers before a meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce. "A return to sound economic reasoning and a common sense diagnosis is the sure solution to the problems of America today," Mr. Hook said.

Emphasizing that industry has a definite program for industrial recovery, Mr. Hook, who is president of American Rolling Mill company, outlined three cardinal points, including revision of the Wagner act, revision of the tax structure and banishment of existing and threatened government competition with private enterprise. "Remove these causes of fear and uncertainty," Mr. Hook said, "and private savings will rush back into the channels of private productive enterprise.

"We specifically urge amendments to the Wagner act to correct its one-sided character, to enforce responsibility on labor organizations, to separate the functions of fact finding, prosecution and judicial decision, and establish impartial administration by the national labor relations board."

Twenty More Federal Judges

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the bill creating 20 additional federal judges throughout the country. The measure is the largest judgeship bill passed by congress since 1921.

Five additional Circuit Court of Appeals judges at $12,500 a year each and 15 additional district judges at $10,000 a year each are authorized by the act.

Strike Back at Morgan

TESTIFYING before the joint congressional committee of investigation, David E. Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan, directors of the Tennessee Valley authority, accused Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, their ousted colleague, with trying to sabotage the TVA's legal defense in a court case involving the constitutionality of the authority. They said, too, that he had engaged in a campaign of dissent and obstruction.

David E. Lilienthal

These charges, together with a general denial of Arthur Morgan's accusations against themselves, constituted in the main their defense statements.

Referring to the trial last winter of the suit of 18 private utility concerns against the TVA, Lilienthal said: "It is a record which suggests that he was seeking to find a way to obtain a judicial decision against his own agency. It is a record of tampering with prospective witnesses for the government and of obstructing and harassing counsel and witnesses in the very heat of the trial of a crucial constitutional case."

Concerning the Berry marble claims, Lilienthal said: "Any assertion that we (Harcourt Morgan and himself) by word or attitude encouraged any one to pull punches on Berry's claims is an outright falsehood. There was absolutely no evidence upon which any charge of fraud could have been based; there were only rumors and suspicions."

Dean Mumford Dies

DEAN HERBERT W. MUMFORD of the University of Illinois is dead, following an automobile accident, and the country loses one of its best agricultural educators and marketing experts. Mumford was a product of Michigan. In 1901 he became professor of animal husbandry in the university at Champaign. Then he was made dean of the college of agriculture and director of the agricultural experiment station and extension service. He was sixty-seven years old at the time of his death.

Sweepstakes Winners

BOIS ROUSSEL, a French bred horse, won the English Derby at Epsom Downs, and four sweepstakes ticket holders in the United States won $150,000 each. Scottish Union, second, won $75,000 each for 11 United States ticket holders. Pasch, the favorite, finished third, returning $50,000 each to seven ticket holders in the United States.

Defies Harry Hopkins

VICTOR A. CHRISTGAU, Minnesota WPA administrator, quarreled continually with Gov. Elmer Benson and the Farmer-Labor party leaders in that state. So Harry Hopkins, national head of the WPA, notified him he was ousted. Christgau refused to quit his position, contending that only President Roosevelt, who appointed him, had power to dismiss him.

War Pensions Boosted

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed a bill to increase the pensions of certain soldiers, sailors and nurses who served in the Spanish war, Philippine insurrection or China relief expedition.

The act provides a $60 monthly pension for veterans sixty-five years old who served at least 90 days and to those who served less than 90 days and were discharged for disability incurred in service.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

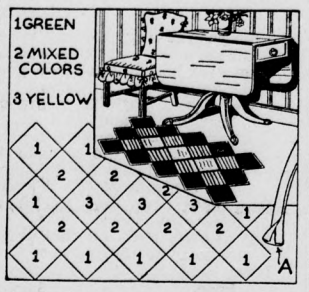
THE diagram shows how the contrasting squares are arranged to give the rug its interesting design. Whatever color scheme you use, black will be most effective for joining the squares and for an edging of single crochet around the outside of the rug. If the materials you have are not the colors you want, don't forget there is always the dye pot.



Producing your own colors may be the most exciting part of rug making.

A crocheted rag rug like the one shown here uses odds and ends. Wool rags make a nicer rug than cotton, or rug yarn may be substituted if desired. Either a wood or large steel crochet hook is used. The rug shown here measures 36 by 21 inches. The 5-inch squares are made separately in single crochet stitch and then joined with crochet slip-stitch. If rags are used, tear or cut the strips not more than 1¼ inches wide, and work with the raw edges turned in as shown here at A. Measure each square carefully so they will all be exactly the same size. Full instructions for slip covers for side chairs like the one shown are in the book offered below.

NOTE: Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Forty-eight pages of illustrated directions for making slipcovers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Improving Meat Flavor.—The flavor of boiled ham, salt beef or tongue which is to be served cold is much improved if meat is left in the water in which it was boiled until it is cold.

Beauty in Crocheted Linens

Cross-stitched bouquets in crocheted baskets can be a needlewoman's pride. Try these on your linens and be delighted with the decorative result for they'll transform towels, pillowcases, and scarfs. Other cross-stitch motifs that may be used alone are given.

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-Granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, adds his plea to Sally Ann to save Sarah Lynn, as does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keaton Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wangle a flight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women, through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing on Gunnar, and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to warn him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the airport. Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him. When he realizes it is Sarah Lynn, he shouts, "Keep away from me, drunken fool," will listen to no explanation, and detours to Fresno. Thrown out at Fresno "like a sack of mail," Sarah Lynn is greeted by a group headed by a bride and groom, who recognize Gunnar. While the "bride" drives Sarah Lynn to the hotel to await her father, one of the party phones the story to the newspapers, identifying the two fliers, and the "bride" as Kitty Medill, wild stunt flier. Danavale is convinced Sarah Lynn had been drugged. Uncle Lynn promises to get the truth to Gunnar. Sally Ann takes Sarah Lynn abroad, and writes Uncle Lynn of her plan to make an aviatrix out of her. Sarah Lynn receives a cable from home, saying her mother is threatened with pneumonia. Sarah Lynn arrives home. Gunnar comes to ask her pardon and invites her to fly.

Conrad Jordan observed him with satisfaction. "That lad will never smash up through his own carelessness," he nodded. He amplified it for her—"Most of the crashes occur on the ground."

"I see," Sarah Lynn said quickly. He considered her shrewdly. "I believe you do." They were stepping nearer to the plane and he said above the roar, "You can get aboard now." He took her elbow in a firm hand and helped her into the cabin.

She sat down quickly in the rear seat, fastening the belt about her waist, calmly folding her hands in her lap.

The Hermod taxied sturdily down the field and took off trimly. There were instants when it seemed to hang in the clear air, suspended over the field. She could see Conrad Jordan waving. Presently he lost dignity and importance and became a tiny toy figure in a world of playthings and vanished altogether.

They flew over the Santa Cruz mountains, brown, green, compact as if they had been carved out of wood and painted.

They circled the water and turned inland again, picking up the mountains, Danavale, San Jose, the airport, like dropped stitches.

Sarah Lynn caught her breath. "Quick Such heavenly quickness!"

He nodded. "I have named him for Hermod, the swift one. You know?"

"I know. Hermes—Mercury."

"Yes. We go down, now."

The west was darkening when they swooped to earth with a suave landing and rolled briskly to the hangar.

The old attendant came limping to open the door and help her out. Conrad Jordan was not in sight.

"He said would you come speak to him in the 'phone booth," the man addressed Gunnar, and the Norwegian ace followed him in.

The older flier stood with the receiver in his hand. "Hello, Gunnar! Do you mind? I'm waiting for this Glendale connection. Will you run Miss Dana home for me?"

"Please don't trouble," she said quickly. "They will send a car for me." But Gunnar was already stepping toward the roadster and she followed him.

He drove a car as smoothly as a plane. They had ticked off a twilight mile before he spoke. "You have no fear."

"No."

"That is good."

After a moment she said, "I want to be a flier."

"That is also good."

"Then, you think women should fly?"

"Why not? Women have courage; the skill they may learn. In the ancient history of my country the women fought often beside their men."

"I know." She remembered the governess' books from the library.

"My grandmother," he began again, his voice warmer than she had heard it before, "there could be no more of courage in woman or man." Presently he said, "Your grandmother I also like."

Sarah Lynn kindled. "Oh, Great-granny's splendid! She ran away from home when she was fifteen and joined an emigrant train and came across the plains in a covered wagon, and there were Indians and hunger and thirst and—"

They were running into Danavale. "Oh, not my uncle's house! I want to go home, please. To the left." It would be over in a moment and there was a thing she must ask. "I've been wondering. There isn't any fear, I know that, of course, but when you're flying alone, hour after hour, do you ever think about death?"

"Often," he told her readily. "With great interest. But not with—what is your word?—eagerment?"

She nodded; it seemed an excellent word.

"This house?" The large, complacement dwelling of Edwin and Adelaide Dana was all golden windows. "Of death: yes. An adventure," Gunnar Thorwald said, stopping the car. "Life is one adventure; death is another. I wish you the good-evening."

Sarah Lynn stepped out, and instantly, without another word, he was away.

Gunnar Thorwald drove Conrad Jordan's car swiftly back to the airport and found the Hermod put away for the night and his friend waiting for him outside the hangar.

"So," the Norwegian ace said gravely, "you are satisfied? I have asked the pardon; I have taken her to fly. It is finished."

"You mean—?"

It must have been almost at the same instant that Lynn Dana was typing to his traveling cousin in Geneva. "And so, Sally Ann, my dear, it has begun!"

Sarah Lynn was twenty years old on the fifteenth of June. Her first waking thought was, "Now I'm exactly old enough to begin my flight training!"

For months she had been saying, "I'd like to fly," and "I want to fly," and finally, "I'm going to fly!" but without any deeper delving into the proposition.

Sarah Lynn's place at the breakfast table was festive with flowers and tissue-and-ribboned packages. Her mother made much of birthdays.

Her dark and difficult daughter opened her gifts with grateful warmth and ran to kiss and thank her.

"I'm so glad they make you happy, darling. But you haven't looked at the big box yet," she reminded her archly.

It would be from Duncan Van Doren, of course, from the smartest of San Francisco florists. She lifted away damp layers of glistening green paper and registered authentic appreciation. She touched lilies-of-the-valley and forget-me-nots and tiny pink rosebuds with her brown figer-tips. "Duncan has perfect taste."

"Ah, yes, hasn't he?" her mother said gratefully. "Will you arrange them now, dear? The low green bowls and the little crystal vases for the lilies?"

"You fix them for me, Mother, please! You do it so much better—and Penny's waiting. I promised to walk with her."

Mrs. Dana was wistfully cheery about it, sure that a brisk walk would do her child good. "But don't stay away too long, darling!" she said with the look which meant her sly, sweet hopes. "Happy plans for the birthday."

Sarah Lynn found the governess and the greyhound waiting for her. They set off together through the increasing loveliness of the day.

"Queer! No presents from Great-granny and Uncle Lynn!"

"Ah, well, the day's not done!" Miss Pennington wagged her head in its stern, out-dated sailor hat.

"Penny, where shall we go? The high meadow? Remember how I used to tease the ladybugs and make them fly away home and tell them their houses were on fire and their children would burn?"

"I remember."

"Uncle Lynn and Great-granny used to call me Ladybug, didn't they? I haven't thought of that for years."

"Haven't you, indeed?"

Something in her tone made Sarah Lynn halt. "Penny, dear, we are going too fast? Lightning seems to set the pace but we can shift into low if you like!"

"Certainly not!"

"Oh, look at Lightning;" The greyhound, at the bend of the road, tensely silhouetted, was gazing fixedly into space. "Isn't she glorious when she's sighting something? Her lines do things to me, like sunsets and symphonies."

They rounded the curve and Sarah Lynn cried: "There's a plane! Look, Penny—a plane in our field!" She began to run, Lightning bounding before with shrill, suspicious barks.

There in the center of the broad meadow, searing already toward the long, bright, rainless summer, an airplane rested on the ground like some great bird briefly breaking its flight. It did not look disabled to Sarah Lynn, and the pilot stood unhurt beside it. Out of gas, probably. There was a closed car close by, and she was abreast of it before she realized it was the one shared by her great-grandmother and her uncle.

She stood still, then, beginning to shake with excitement.

The ancestress hopped nimbly out of the machine and hurried to her. There were dabs of dull crimson on her cheek-bones and she was laughing in her shrill, cackling giggle.

Her great - granddaughter managed a strangled whisper. "What—what is it?"

"It's your covered wagon, Sairy Lynn!"

"For me? To keep?" Questions going off like a string of small firecrackers.

"Yours," Lynn Dana answered from the windows of the car.

She ran to him, her mouth working. "Uncle Lynn, Uncle Lynn! Not—belonging to me? To fly?"

"All yours and only yours. Many happy returns from Great-Granny and me. We let Conrad Jordan and Gunnar Thorwald pick it out for us, but we were very firm about having a Gipsy Moth." He grinned at her. "It was the nearest we could get."

Then she saw what he meant. The little ship was painted a clear, sharp, lacquer red with its name in black letters—L A D Y B U G.

The pilot tugged briefly at his cap. "Le Roy's my name. Flew her over for you." He had a deeply scarred face and a bitter mouth, but there was a look of weathered and seasoned youth about him. "Want to take a hop?"

"Yes! But first I must look!" She walked round and round the plane, several times putting out a hand to touch it. Then she went back to the donors and gave a hand to each and stood staring at them.

"Great-granny, Uncle Lynn—" she began, trying to assemble an adequate sentence. She shut her eyes and kept the lids tight for a long instant before she opened them again, and the nonagenarian and the man who had sat still in a chair for more than half his life would always remember the drowned glory of them. "Do you mind if I go?" she asked huskily.

"You just up'n put out, Sairy Lynn," the ancient woman told her, shrilly competing with the noise of the motor.

The man said with his good grin, "Ladybug, Ladybug, fly away home!"

Then she ran back to the plane, Lightning beside her. "Are you going to teach me?"

The pilot nodded without undue enthusiasm.

"How long will it take?"

She shrugged. "Depends."

She flushed. "Of course. But, I mean, if I try with all my might—if I'm not too dumb—if I study and work—"

"Just for a Private, of course. Private Flying License. That's the quickest. Ten hours instruction, ten hours solo flying; that's the minimum."

"Yes," she said contentedly. "When is my first lesson?"

"Tomorrow."

"Oh, not today?"

He shook his head. "Physical examination—lots of details to fix up. But I'll hop you over to the field, now, and your folks'll drive over after you. Ready?" With swift strength he swung her up and into the cockpit and climbed in himself.

CHAPTER VIII

Soon they were taxiing over the meadow, and Sarah Lynn saw with a warm uprush of gratitude that it had been leveled into the semblance of a decent landing-field. Great-granny, Uncle Lynn, going to that extra expense so that she might see her Ladybug first in the setting of old memories.

The plane turned, disdained the browning grass, rose serenely into the air. Instantly, Sarah Lynn knew in a blaze of ecstasy that she had never flown before! Turning traitor to all earlier thrills, she realized that a cabin-plane cut in two the kingdom and the power and the glory. Now, with nothing between her and the sky, she was really flying!

"My first flight in my own plane!" she told herself rapturously. "I can never be as happy as this again if I live to be a hundred!"

She wished passionately that there were more hours instead of minutes before her, but the Gipsy Moth devoured the miles relentlessly, and came daintily down at the San Jose airport.

Men came running with grinning, friendly faces to help her out, mechanics, helpers, attendants. There was a youth with a camera which clicked as Sarah Lynn stepped to the ground.

"Well, Miss Dana, how do you like your boat? Slick job, huh? Going to fly her yourself?" He came closer. "Mind if I get one of you and Gunnar Thorwald together?" the reporter persisted. "Shaking hands, huh? Sort of 'Welcome to the sky!'"

"Gunnar Thorwald isn't here," she began coldly, but then she saw him coming toward her. "Oh, please, we'd rather not!" She kept her head down.

The Norwegian ace reached them. "I drive you home," he said without preliminary greeting.

The young newspaper man managed a snapshot while they got into Jordan's car. "Thanks a lot!" he called out, his nose looking pertly triumphant.

They rolled out of the field and down the road.

"Oh, I forgot!" Sarah Lynn said. "Great-granny and Uncle Lynn were coming for me! I'm afraid I must wait for them."

"We meet them on the road?"

"Yes, we could—"

"You must go quickly home?"

"Oh, no," she discarded the happy birthday plans at which her mother had archly hinted. "You mean—"

"I have the earnest wish to see those large trees."

A muscle twitched in her cheek. "Then we'll go to Felton, over the mountains, an hour, an hour and a half—"

Human Head Swells in Literal and Not Metaphorical Sense as Owner Grows Older

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian institution, has found that the human head swells in a literal and not a metaphorical sense as its owner grows older, notes a writer in the New York Sun. The theory is supported by the testimony of Sir Flinders Petrie, the eminent archeologist and Egyptologist, who has kept tab on his hat sizes through the years. At twenty a size 6½ hat fitted him comfortably; at thirty he required a 7 to 7⅛; with the passing of another decade his hat size increased by a quarter; at fifty another quarter was added, and at sixty his head had outgrown all standard size hats. The Smithsonian considers this record as of more than usual significance "because of the incessant and continued intellectual work of the English archeologist."

In the Aleutian islands, off the southern coast of Alaska, Dr. Hrdlicka discovered a skull with a brain capacity of 2,005 cubic centimeters. This find aroused great interest because the skull, so far as is known, is the second largest in the history of mankind. The record is held by the skull of Turgenev, the Russian novelist, with a brain capacity of 2,030 cubic centimeters. The average skull capacity is about 1,450 centimeters for men and from 1,250 to 1,300 for women. Other mental giants were Daniel Webster, with a measurement of 2,000 cubic centimeters; Bismarck, with 1,965; Beethoven, with 1,750; and Kant, with 1,740. On the other hand, Napoleon's brain weighed only 68.5 ounces and Walt Whitman's only 45.3, compared with the 74 ounces registered by Turgenev's. It follows, therefore, that sheer weight of brain is not necessarily an index to high intelligence. What counts more is the "bark" or cortex of gray matter that sheaths the convolutions of the cerebral hemispheres. The size of the dead Aleut's skull does not in itself prove that he towered mentally above his fellows when he was alive.

Use of Mallow

Mallow was known in Mahomet's time. To eat mallow in the morning would prevent one from getting disease. Ointment made from mallow was supposed to cure all those affected by witchcraft and also to prevent burns from hot metal.

PENNY WISE

CONGRESSMEN CAN'T VOTE to increase their salaries, but there's more than one way of fattening up that $10,000 a year stipend. Temptation lurks everywhere on Capitol Hill. Who wouldn't find it hard to resist?

There was that recent dossier, for example, revealing that congressmen charge up an average of $31,000 each in personal expenses every year for Uncle Sam to take care of. And he does, generously! He even footed the bill for such intriguing items as "15 gross soap of assorted varieties, including scented, $127; 25 doz. bath towels, $175; packing boxes, $2,500."

The irrepressible and penny-wise Mr. Patman, of Texarkana, Tex., has worked out another method for making his $10,000 nest egg hatch dividends. Having composed a complex, multiplex, law, he has now become author in earnest and written a substantial tome called, "The Robinson-Patman Act: What You Can and Cannot Do Under This Law."

By paying $4.50 for the book, merchants who would like to sell a pair of shoes or a package of dried apricots, can now find out from Rep. Patman how to do it without fear of landing on Alcatraz.

This enterprising legislator, who is willing to tell businessmen—for a price—what they can do without getting jailed by his Act, is also anxious to help small businessmen run their enterprises. The other day he introduced a bill in Congress to provide them with extension courses in business administration to be conducted by the Federal Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce! The bill would be financed by a federal appropriation of $500,000 for the first year, increasing yearly thereafter. Frankly, we'd like to get the sense of Rep. Patman's proposed destruction tax on retail networks, before starting in to worry about THAT one.

Next thing you know, he'll be charging for diplomas in his extension school. Irrepressible politicians are like that.

DAD HAS HIS DAY

HE PROBABLY won't know it until he reads these lines, but Sunday, June 19, is set aside in his honor. The occasion, the festivities, the gifts, are all for him.

A dinner may be tendered in his honor, and if it is, you may find him out in the kitchen helping shell the peas, or tinkering helpfully with the oven regulator, so that dinner will be ready on time.

A box of cigars may be offered him in greeting this Sunday afternoon, and if it is, one of the youngsters will first borrow his car to go down town after them and forget to bring the car back for two or three hours.

A few of the neighbors may be asked over to share in the fun during the holiday-making in his honor, but the neighbors must not be permitted to see how badly the front lawn is in need of a trimming, so he—the guest of honor—will don an old pair of trousers and furiously ply the lawn-mower back and forth over the greensward.

But after reading this far, he must know for sure that Sunday, June 19, is Father's Day. Even if the gifts of cigars and neckties aren't quite to his liking, he'll probably be glad and awfully pleased that you remembered!

THE JOKE IS ENDED

AFTER TWELVE YEARS of mirthless laughter, Charles Vance Millar's little joke is ended. From the grave, the Toronto millionaire has had his laugh, has seen his "Stork Derby" place a dollar sign on motherhood.

For now at last the "Stork Derby" is a matter of history. Richer by $100,000 each, four mothers may now settle down to the business of mothering their 36 prize-winning offspring. A sign marked $400,000 on a batch of 36 boys and girls, that works out to about $11,111 on a piece basis, or $66,666 if you take a half dozen.

Millar, who left stock in race tracks to Toronto's ministers and brewery stock to prohibitionists, would have liked that paradox—placing a price tag on the most priceless thing in life. From beyond the grave the eccentric millionaire has had his last laugh, a laugh not echoed by those million of parents who find in their own children a treasure too precious for any dollar signs, big or small.

THREE LITTLE BOYS

ON THE SHORES of Long Island lies the headless body of a little boy, his arms and feet hacked off and his legs tightly bound with wire. Young Peter Levine lies sacrificed on the altar of crime.

In a Chicago elevated station, two twelve-year-old boys, armed with revolvers, stage a hold-up. Thwarted, they open fire on the cashier with cries of "Shoot her down!" and "Let her have it!" Those boys will one day pay the price of crime, a life in prison or death.

Three little boys! Their plight ought to make clear to America that an era comparatively free of crime is drawing to a close. After years of terrorism, an arroused America slew the beast of organized crime. But crime, like the dragons of old, is a many-lived monster. Brought under control, it slinks away to its cave for a few short years, to spring again when its prey has been lulled into slumber by a few years of peace.

Today, with kidnaping, robbery, hold-up attack, and murder again swinging up in the news, crime is again on the march. Today, as before, only aroused public sentiment will bring the monster of lawlessness to heel.

Three little boys or three thousand! The poison of crime can be checked. The antidote is an awakened public. Let us use it!

WHAT HAPPENS?

WHAT HAPPENS when the bank won't let you borrow any more money on your house, your business, your car, or your personal note? Translated into national figures, that's a question the federal government is trying to answer, a question it must answer in the near future.

With a $6000 million deficit looming ahead in the coming fiscal year, federal financial experts predict a total national debt of $42,000 million within the next twelve months. That's within a few million dollars of the $45,000 million limit on federal debt set by act of congress.

What happens when you can't live within your means and can't borrow any more? You have to change your way of living and live within your means. What happens when a government can't live within its means and can't borrow any more? Only the future will tell!

FIFTY THOUSAND PARENTS

THE AMERICAN WOMAN may be the nation's No. 1 budget specialist and domestic finance expert, but an American woman for president? "Never!" is the emphatic cry of some 50,000 parents who were asked that very question by the Child Welfare League of America the other day.

If the American woman wants a career—and you'll find thousands of them hot-footing it in that direction after June commencement—there's no objection to that from the 50,000 mothers and fathers. And as for being the nation's No. 1 budget specialist and finance expert, the American woman has virtually preempted that field. So don't let her abdicate, urge 50,000 parents in opposing a woman for president. As chief executive, she might grow careless with our purse-strings. Fifty thousand parents can't be wrong.

A CHECKMATE IN CHESS

LIKE A PAIR of agile opponents in an international chess match, Benes of Czechoslovakia and Hitler of Germany go on making their moves on the map of Europe.

Hitler protests invasion of Czech planes. Benes reports German planes over Czechoslovakia. Hitler moves troops to the Sudeten border. Benes rolls out a new army class. Hitler expands army games. Benes orders military training for all Czechs from six to sixty.

For the first time, the captain of the Dictator team finds himself matched with a democratic opponent as skillfull, as active, and as swift in action as himself. Again and again Hitler moves for a checkmate, expecting the doddling slowness that had marked the play of his other democratic opponents. But each time Benes makes his counter move with speed, skill, and precision. And each time Hitler hesitates.

That hesitation may mean peace for Europe. Hitler has given repeated indication that he moves to the kill only when his oppenent is helpless. Each move he has made in the past has been made only when the odds were certain. Now, for the first time, he finds one democratic foe unwilling to bow to the conqueror, one enemy, perhaps not as strong, but at least as agile as himself.

Peace for Europe! That may be the result if Benes earns his right to the title of "Europe's smartest little statesman" by holding to his pledge, "We will show the neighboring regimes that the machinery of a democratic state can work just as fast as theirs."

FOR SENATE

PHILIP BANCROFT

Northern California campaign headquarters have been opened in 214 Chancery Building, 564 Market street, San Francisco, for Philip Bancroft, Republican candidate for United States Senator. George Haigh, well-known business executive and fraternal leader, is in charge of headquarters; assisted by Miss Alma Canavan, secretary of the women's division.

In a progressive Republican platform of militant declarations, having for their objective the early removal of recession and backward business conditions in California, Mr. Bancroft recently announced his candidacy for the U. S. Senate. He has been a forceful and energetic leader among California farmers for many years, and is greatly respected by them, as well as by leaders of business, industry and organized labor. He has come out with a fearless denunciation of Communism and sinister influences prevalent in radical and leftist groups.

Although always active in politics when issues were at stake, he has never before been a candidate for public office. He was one of the original California progressives, having been a pioneer in the Lincoln-Roosevelt League. In 1908 he was one of the two progressive Republicans who broke the machine slate and went to the national convention as delegates. Again in 1912 he was elected member of the Republican National Convention and became a member of the Progressive National Convention that same year under the banner of Theodore Roosevelt and Hiram W. Johnson. In 1936 he was again a California delegate to the Republican National Convention.

The Guild Thrift shop will be opened Monday, June 13 in the building adjoining the Red Front store. Anyone wishing to leave articles for the store will call at the Hotel Annex. If unable to deliver articles call 137J or 93J and arrangements for their collection will be made.

St. George is supposed to have slain the dragon near the shore of St. George's bay, on which stands Beirut, Syria. The well into which the dead body of the dragon was cast is pointed out to those who are willing to accept its authenticity.

CANDIDATE

EUGENE GRATTAN

From all parts of Santa Clara county friends of Eugene B. Grattan, young San Jose attorney, are pledging him support in his campaign for district attorney.

Grattan, who recently announced his candidacy, visited Campbell conferring with local supporters. He said he was extremely gratified at the interest shown in his campaign.

A four point platform of fearless prosecution of criminals, efficiency in office practice, an educational program of crime prevention and economy in the costs of prosecution is offered by Grattan.

Thirty six years of age, Grattan has been engaged in legal practice in San Jose for the past 10 years, during which time he has built up a reputation in both criminal and civil law, as well as for his leadership in youth organizations and amateur athletics.

"As District Aattorney, I will work for the people of Santa Clara county with the same zeal and industry I have served clients in my private practice," Grattan said. "I will try all important cases personally and will not, through indolence or timidity attempt to evade any of the responsibilities of my office."

A graduate of the University of Iowa, where he won a place on the United States Olympic games wrestling team, Grattan came to San Jose in 1928. Since then through volunteered coaching he has produced championship wrestling teams at the Y. M. C. A. and the State College. He has also found time to conduct classes on city anl county government, law enforcement and criminology at the San Jose department of adult education and the State College Police School.

Grattan is well known in Campbell, where he has made addresses before local organizations on child welfare, crime prevention and other subjects, and where he lived for a time.

Possessing considerable experience in criminal cases, Grattan has made a thorough study of crime and juvenile delinquency. In the celebrated Rose Regis case several years ago, Grattan won state-wide renown for his work in reuniting a little Chinese boy, held in a Santa Cruz mountain children's home, with his mother.

Married, a home owner and a taxpayer, Grattan is a director of the Kiwanis club, has been active in Boy Scout and Sea Scout work, the Junior Olympics and the Kiwanis camp for underprivileged children.

"If elected, I will fight against crime and its exploiters until it is reduced to a minimum. Swift and sure convictions will serve an emphatic notice on all those who live by crime that their activities will not be tolerated in Santa Clara county," Grattan said.

Will Attend Hy-Y Congress in Ky.

Newell Bohnett, Paul Borg, and Don Martin will be delegates from the Campbell club to the national Hi-Y congress at Berea, Kentucky June 25-29.

The local boys will leave Saturday with a party led by John Way, instructor at Sequoia high school. The group will motor east, stopping at such points of interest as the Grand canyon, Boulder dam, Hot Springs National park, Delta Cooperative farm, Great Smokey National park, Norris dam and Salt Lake City. The trip will include about twelve states.

High school boys from 46 states are expected to attend the congress. Hi-Y clubs in the United States and Canada have nearly 200,000 members.

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary Agricultural Council of California

Persons who refuse to accept work at prevailing wages, whatever those prevaling wages are, will be denied relief this year by the State Relief Administration!

That firm declaration of policy by Harold E. Pomeroy, state relief administrator, certainly deserves the hearty commendation of California agriculture and all California taxpayers.

Mr. Pomeroy's statement was in answer to the demands of radical groups which had insisted that the state provide haven and support for persons refusing to work for wages which they considered too low.

"We can't use public refief to change conditions throughout the state," the state relief administrator declared in his enunciation of policy. "That would mean bankruptcy for the state. We haven't enough money from tax funds to do that.

"If business, agriculture, or industry can only pay a certain wage and that is the prevailing wage, then we can't give relief to those who refuse to work at that figure.

"We can't lift ourselves by our own bootstraps above the general level of conditions in the United States and we can't use relief funds to lift ourselves above the average level of conditions in California.

"Our position, therefore, is that relief will be denied wherever work is available under conditions that are prevailing. Of course, we will not have our organization used to help those who would chisel under prevailing standards, but otherwise our position stands."

The soundness — and absolute necessity—of such a ruling will be self-evident to any employer of labor, whether farmer or business man, who realizes the large part which relief costs play in the present extortionate tax load.

And it will be even more enthusiastically received by many farmers who have had personal experience with "unemployed" who refused work at prevailing farm wages because they could get as much or more in relief payments without the inconvenience of working for their "paychecks."

It is to be regretted that the federal relief agencies have adopted a much more lenient attitude that the state, however. For there is a growing realization on the part of many students of present-day conditions that relief rolls never will be purged of the drones and the shiftless until drastic action is taken to weed out the chiselers.

At the present time, California's state relief rolls harbor nearly 65,000 cases, representing 240,000 persons—nearly 20,000 more than were on state relief at this period a year ago.

But that is only a fraction of the actual relief roll in California. Taking all types of relief into consideration, the authorities estimate that California has one out of seven on relief, with at least 400,000 finding shelter (and support) here who migrated to the state within the last few years.

It would be unfair to condemn the great majority of those now on relief in California as undeserving, for no one can discount the fact that many are victims of conditions which were beyond their control and will gladly take work when it is available.

For those who can't help themselves, the state must provide help. But it is equally true that thousands of California taxpayers, who have been able to keep their heads above water by dint of hard work and refusal to be licked, are desperately in need of tax relief at the earliest possible opportunity.

With one out of seven on relief, it is time for all government officials to consider the welfare of the industrious workers who are packing the load for the idle. And it is certainly time to crack down on those who refuse work because the wages or working conditions don't appeal to them and yet expect to be fed and supported while they await a return to high wage scale.

Amos Williams to Seek Election as Coroner, August

AMOS O. WILLIAMS

Amos O. Williams, with many friends and acquaintances in this community, has announced his intention to seek again the post of coroner of Santa Clara county, nominations for this office to be made at the August 30 primary election.

Mr. Williams, a native of Santa Clara Valley, has long been a leader in fraternal and civic affairs, and, with the exception of the incumbent, is the only candidate who knows the job of coroner through having served in this capacity before. Mr. Williams, it is a matter of record, operated the office of coroner within its budget during his entire administration. At the insistance of many valley supporters Mr. Williams has decided to run again.

He is a member of the San Jose Chamber of Commerce, the First Methodist Church, the Lions club, Richards Club, Masonic Lodge, San Jose Scottish Rite Bodies and Knights Templar, Islam Shrine and Santa Clara Valley Shrine Club, Sciots, Order of Amaranth, Eastern Star, the White Shrine, Elks, W. O. W., Rebekahs, Odd Fellows and Native Sons.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Williams commented, "If it is the wish of the voters of this county, I shall be happy to serve them as their coroner as I have in the past. My platform is just as it always has been, the experienced administration of a public trust honestly and economically."

"Squaring the Circle," Alcazar

When Russia started out on its first five-year program there was much to be learned by "cut and fit" before it could be made fully operative. A stern dictator could be stern but still he apparently did not have all the answers. Among the problems which arose which were to be dealt with "cut and fit" were the twin problems of romance and housing. It is with these two questions that "Squaring the Circle," internationally famous farce comedy opening at the Alcazar Theatre next Monday, June 13, deals.

"Squaring the Circle" is by Valentine Katayev. Mr. Katayev is described as being bumptious, debunking. He was a former prisoner in a Cheka calaboose in Odessa for his aptness with a typewriter but this did not deter him from taking probably the same typewriter in lap and, unafraid of the frosty stares of Soviet officials and glowering secret police, grinding out one of the funniest plays ever written and certainly the most mirth provoking that ever came out of lugubrious Russia. It has been going ever since and it's royalties have made the fun-loving Mr. Katayev a millionaire (in rubles) as strange as that may sound for communistic-share-and-share-alike Sovietland. The play will be directed by Alan Williams and it will have an excellent Federal Theatre cast.

The general Guild of the Congregational church will hold a picnic meeting in Los Gatos park, Thursday, June16. Members will meet at the church at 11 o'clock, where transportation will be arranged. A pot luck dinner will be enjoyed at 12:30.

SUMMER SAVAGES

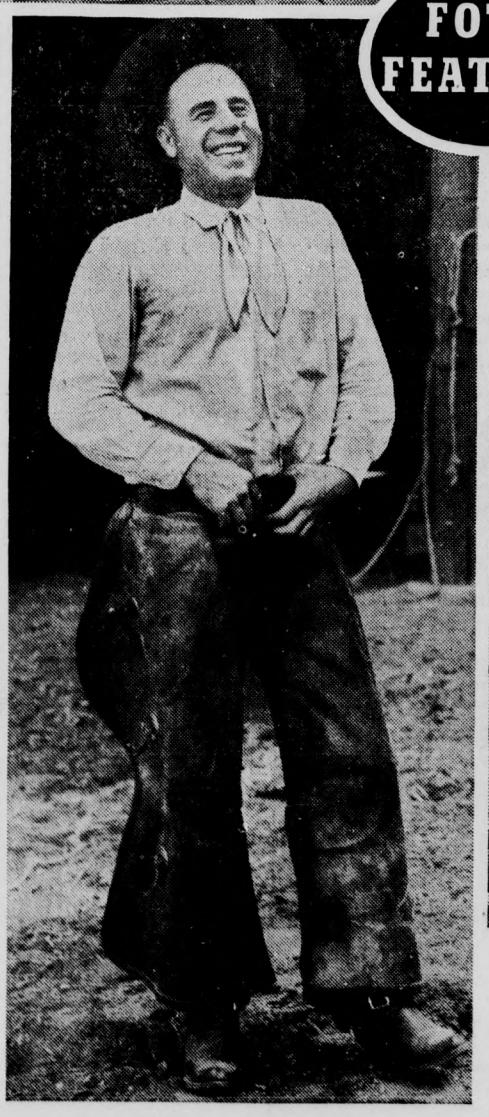
A Senator's daughter, Marjorie Nye of Cooperstown, N. D., was a "pillow puncher." So was Marjorie Thacker (right) of Minneapolis. They lived in the girls' dormitory, "Sleepy Hollow," and maintained cabins at one of Yellowstone's six camping centers. The government fee for visitors is $3 per car. Additional costs, regulated by the government, depend on accommodations.

TO UNCLE SAM, its proprietor, Yellowstone National Park is so-many acres of woodland. But to last year's 499,242 visitors the park is also remembered for its 1,500 "savages," mostly college students who spend their vacations serving park guests. Many come from prominent families. Savages are notorious for their colorful vocabulary. To them visitors arriving in busses (driven by "gear-jammers") are "dudes," while campers are "sage-brushers." Dishwashers become "pearldivers." Laundresses are "bubble queens" and a howling baby is a "lap organ." Most versatile of Yellowstone's savages is the "pack rat" who does everything from wheeling grips in a "mollie" (baggage cart) to lighting cabin fires with "dope."

Agnes Midgley of Salt Lake City worked as "heaver" (waitress) last summer. She was one of 1,500 savages chosen from among thousands of applications. Workers arrive by June 15 each year, promptly forgetting that last week they were football captains or campus queens. Overnight they awaken winter-weary hotels and cabins. But the park has been open for several weeks.

Yellowstone offers romance for savages in "rotten logging" as illustrated by a university of Montana collegian and Miss Carol Dean of North Dakota university. Savages also enjoy mountain climbing and group activities.

FOTO-FEATURE



A typical smiling "pack rat" who lives in the "rat's nest" (men's dormitory) was Dale Farringer of North Dakota university. But the most authentic type of savage is Archie Martin, Yellowstone's head wrangler in charge of saddle trips. Some "dude" riders ask for saddles without the horn (Western type) because they "don't expect much traffic."

College science instructors, like Neil Miner (left) show tourists the park and are called "90-day wonders." At right is William Kearns, assistant park naturalist. A small staff of rangers and naturalists is maintained all year.

Mr. Robertson is the H. G. Wells of industry. His "shape of things to come," which he has been outlining for the last year or two, includes the following specifications:

Migratory humans, shifting north and south like the birds. "Just whether the children will be born in the North or the South," he said, "is not quite clear to me, but I expect we will follow the policy of the birds and have the children in the North."

IT WAS only a year ago that Robert R. Young, thirty-nine-year-old Texan, quite unknown to Wall Street, rode herd on the straying Van Sweringen system and corralled it. It was all bewilderingly complicated, but, finally sifted down, it appeared that Mr. Young had picked up a $3,000,000,000 rail "empire" with an original investment of $225,000.

Young Texan Rode Herd on Rail System

He is a quiet, inconspicuous, unassuming man, and now the feature writers are just getting around to calling him a "Titan."

He won a rock-and-sock proxy battle for the control of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. Within the last few years, he has infiltrated gently into high finance, which is just now becoming acutely conscious of his presence.

His family was in and around Canadian, Texas, before the battle of the Alamo. They started the First National Bank of Canadian, which is now in the hands of the fourth generation.

At Culver Military academy, Robert R. Young was graduated at the head of his class, its youngest graduate, and later he attended the University of Virginia. With the Du Ponts in 1916, he got his preliminary work-out in finance and joined General Motors in 1922.

Career at Culver Was Prophetic

In 1932, he founded his own Wall Street firm, with Frank F. Kolbe, his later associate in the Van Sweringen putsch.

Mrs. Young is the former Anita Ten Eyck O'Keefe, of Williamsburg, Va., sister of Georgia O'Keefe, the painter. In 1935, they leased Beechwood, the Astor estate, in Newport.

Mr. Young, a Democrat, like his father, paid $15,000 for a consignment of those famous Democratic convention books, which congressmen, badgering him at a senate hearing, insisted wasn't nearly so much of a bargain as the Van Sweringen deal. "You are a bigger sucker than I thought you were," said Senator Wheeler.

Skating

Skating apparently was originated by the primitive Norsemen, whose sagas boast of the ability of their fighters to move swiftly over the ice on bone runners attached to the feet with leather thongs. Other nations took up the art, the Swedes, Danes, Finns and Dutch all contributing to its early development. In the Third century, the art of ironworking was introduced in Europe, and this led eventually to the development of metal runners and thus to great improvement in skating technique.

Human Remains Found in Park

Yosemite—Park officials reported worn hiking boots, bones of a human foot and other bones, a camera and watch frame were found near the base of Washington column by members of the Sierra Club. Chief Ranger G. S. Townsley estimated the bones had been lying there six or seven years or had washed down in December flood waters. He said the condition of the watch and boots indicated the victim had fallen while trying to scale the trailless slopes of the column which is near Half Dome. Theory that the remains were those of Godfrey Wondrasek, 26-year-old Chicago youth, lost in April, 1933, was discarded when a check of his description showed that he was wearing hightop shoes and not boots. The search for him was one of the most extensive in park history.

Road Extension

Lassen Volcanic National Park—Opening of an additional nine and a half mile section of the Lassen Peak Loop Highway was announced here by John C. Preston, superintendent of Lassen Volcanic National Park. It is the unit between Manzanita Lake at the northwest entrance of the park and Hat Lake, in Lassen's Devastated Area. Decoration Day visitors were able to drive through the Chaos Jumbles and the Dwarf Forest as well as the Devastated Area, which was denuded by the 1915 eruptions of Lassen Peak. At Manzanita Lake, the Loomis Museum is open. Good fishing is being experienced at the lake. Skiers, seeking late Spring skiing, will find slopes easily accessible in the Devastated Area. Snow removal crews have completed the job of opening the road to Hat Lake.

Folsom Felons Have Own Counsel

Folsom Prison—Free legal services will be made available to the 2,800 convicts in Folsom Prison. This was revealed recently by Roy H. Taylor, secretary to Warden Clyde I. Plummer, in a letter to the Represa Sports-Telegram, the prison newspaper. This announcement said: "In order that the boys might receive free legal advice, this office has appointed 'Judge' White to give this service. He will be located in the balcony of the library and will be available during library hours." Judge White, a convict, is Fred G. White, a former county and probate judge of Pontiac, Ill., who practiced many years before the supdeme court of that state. He was sentenced from Los Angeles for grand theft.

Experiment Fund Received

Davis—The United States Beet Sugar Association has presented to the College of Agriculture the sum of $70,000, which is to be used to continue experiments in attempting to devise machinery for the harvesting of sugar beets. Director Knowles A. Ryerson of the college said the experimental work will be carried on over a three year period in the agricultural engineering department. Leading beet sugar manufacturers of the nation contributed to the fund. The donors hope they may be able to get for their money a machine that will harvest the beets mechanically. At present beets are harvested by hand, the labor being done principally by foreigners.

Fan's Fare at Livermore

Livermore—Rodeo fans of California will find Livermore presenting another great exhibition of sports of the Old West on June 11 and 12, when the annual Livermore Rodeo will be held, with twenty-two events on the two-day program.

$12,000 for New School

Los Angeles—A grant of $12,000 for establishment of a school for venereal diseases at the University of California was announced by Dr. Malcolm H. Merrill, chief, Bureau of Venereal Diseases, State Department of Public Health. In addition the bureau will finance a one-year course for at least 10 physicians in an educational plan creating a group of specially trained men.

Hooks Huge Shark, Then Dies

San Diego—Guy Anderson, 45 years of age, hooked a 150-pound shark while fishing at La Jolla but the excitement caused his death, Deputy Coroner Gershon reported. While attempting to gaff the huge fish, Anderson suffered a heart attack and collapsed. His wife and others who were watching him fight the fish took the ilne and hauled in the shark.

Lake Road Opens June 15th

Jackson—Harry Clark, maintenance superintendent for state highways in this district, tentatively has set June 15th as the opening date of the Alpine State Highway to Silver Lake. The road now is open as far as the top of the hill at Prospect Rock. The remainder of the highway is blocked by snow. Clark reports four feet of snow at Lumbar Yard Ranger Station. Recently he received word that there was fifty-six inches of snow at Twin Lakes.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

Ulysses Made Great Hero in Homer's Saga

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

WE FORGET 70 per cent of all we have ever learned—so the scientists say. But fortunately, we never entirely forget anything. The path is still in the brain, though not plain enough for use. No doubt you remember Ulysses as a former acquaintance, but perhaps his story as told by the immortal Homer, is vague.

When Paris stole Helen of Troy from Greece, all the kings of Greece were held to their oaths to fight in her behalf.

Ulysses, noted for his wisdom, refused to go into such a war. His life was happy with Penelope, his beautiful wife, so he feigned madness and went about the countryside sowing seeds that had been cooked. The councilmen of Greece suspected cunning so they placed the young son of Ulysses in the path of his plow. When the "madman" reached the child he turned the plow aside, thus disclosing his sanity.

Elizabeth James

The ten years of siege at the walled city of Troy were tedious to Ulysses, who ever longed for Penelope and who feared for her safety after his long absence. In olden days a beautiful woman was none too safe without a husband to protect her. Glad was he indeed, when Troy fell into the hands of the Greeks after the trick of the wooden horse. With light heart he sailed away.

But ill winds beset him and Ulysses wandered over the whole sea, suffering disappointments and narrowly escaping death on many occasions. It was even necessary for him to make a trip into Hades, land of departed souls.

"GREATEST UNKNOWN"

Seven cities claim to be the birthplace of the Greek poet Homer. There is no accurate source for any definite information about the life of this man, yet he composed two of the greatest epics in all the centuries of mankind.

We do know that he lived sometime between the Sixth and Twelfth centuries before Christ was born, and we know that in old age Homer was blind. He made his living wandering from city to city entertaining the people with the stories of the Trojan war and of the wanderings of Ulysses. His "Iliad" and "Odyssey" are known round the world.

Once he and his men found themselves on the island ruled by the one-eyed giants known as Cyclops. They hid in a cave which they discovered to be the home of a giant, who gleefully shut them in his cave and killed two men each day for his dinner. While he slept one afternoon, Ulysses heated a staff and put out the eye of the giant; hoping then to escape. But the passageway was narrow and the giant carefully felt each animal as he let his sheep out to pasture.

With cunning, the Greeks killed all the sheep and skinned them. In the morning they walked out, holding the skins over them.

Other adventures beset the men. There was the island of the Sirens, the lovely women who sang divinely, luring men to their island where the men were then powerless. By stuffing cloth and wax into the ears of his men and having himself lashed securely to the mast, Ulysses passed the Sirens, being the first man to hear them and to escape their charm. Another adventure was the island where an enchantress turned men into animals, but Ulysses gained power over her and freed all the men whom she held.

Penelope's Troubles.

After wandering long and far, Ulysses reached Greece. He had heard of the suitors who had fastened themselves to the household of Penelope on the assumption that her husband had long been dead. They had stolen her substance until she had much ado to protect her husband's home. To evade them she had said that as soon as she completed the web which she was weaving, she would choose a husband. Each day she wove, and each night she unravelled, but now they had discovered her trickery and had forced her to set a date for choosing a husband from among them.

Disguised as a beggar, Ulysses went to the back of his home. The only living thing that recognized him was his dog and it died of joy. His old servant, now a swineherd, recognized a scar on Ulysses, and rejoicing and sorrowing together, told his master of the situation in his home. He praised Penelope's skill in handling the lecherous men. Ulysses sent for his son, now a man, and they two planned revenge.

As a beggar Ulysses went to the banquet. While the revelry was high, he removed the weapons from the hall, leaving the suitors without arms. The time came, and with his son, Ulysses killed the suitors.

Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food

One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved

Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

False Notions About Fruit

A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion.

One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Not Necessary to Sip Milk

Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Danger of Half Truths

The most insidious food fallacies are those which contain some portion of truth—for example, the belief that cooked fruit is more wholesome than raw fruit. It is true that cooking increases the digestibility of some fruits and also has a sterilizing effect. On the other hand, most fruits are easily digested in the raw state, are more palatable and richer in vitamins.

A widespread belief which has a small portion, but only a small portion of truth, is that whole wheat bread is vastly superior to white bread. Whole wheat bread contains more minerals, vitamins and roughage than white bread. But the minerals and vitamins lacking in white bread can easily be supplied by other common foods, and there is no justification for going to the extreme of omitting white bread entirely from the diet.

Fad Diets Lack Balance

Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible

A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods — notably starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting

Fasting is urged by some faddists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

Questions Answered

Mrs. A. F. R., Jr.—Light corn syrup yields nothing but energy values, but dark corn syrup is a good source of iron. Pure molasses is rich in calcium and iron.

Miss M. F.—Nut protein is similar to the protein of meat and fish and nuts may be used in place of these foods when desired. They should not replace milk and eggs, however, as with few exceptions, they are low in minerals and cannot compare with eggs or milk as a source of vitamins.

Influencing Action

The forces that impel action reside in temperament. The ideals and convictions that guide it are hidden in the mind and heart. A man moves slowly or swiftly, he does his work slowly or swiftly, according to the energy that is in him. But the direction of his life, this way or that way, follows the unseen influence of what he admires and loves and believes in.—Henry Van Dyke.

Last Wednesday the men of the Congregational church met for a dinner arranged by the Sigma-Sigma group, the younger women's organization of the church. 45 men were able to acept the invitation and many others unable to attend then have assured the leaders of their interest. At the conclusion of a fine program during which Ira Abbott gave a fine talk on the Redwoods and showed some splendid pictures, the men organized themselves into a Congregational Men's Club. After much discussion the men agreed that the first aim was to be that of fellowship and

Annual Meeting, Christian Science Church, Reported

BOSTON, Mass., June 6—A warning to nations "whose governments have been conceived largely in selfish ambition and brought forth by human force" was issued here today at the Annual Meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, The Mother Church, by The Christian Science Board of Directors who declared the lessons of history show such governing to be "of few days and full of trouble."

Reports disclosed continued growth of the Christian Science movement, increasingly higher standards for authorized periodicals, and a larger number of requests from groups of non-Scientist for representative Christian Scientists to address them.

Election of Ralph Hastings Knapp, C. S., of Needham, Mass., as President of The Mother Church was announced. He succeeds Judge Clifford P. Smith of Newton, Mass. Edward L. Ripley of Brookline and Ezra W. Palmer of Marshfield were re-elected Treasurer and Clerk of the Church respectively. The President is elected by The Christian Science Board of Directors to serve for one year. His duty is to be presiding officer at the Annual Meeting.

Mr. Knapp is a son of Ira O Knapp and Flavia S. Knapp, two of the 12 called upon by Mrs. Eddy to reorganize the Christian Science Church in September, 1892. When a young boy, Mr. Knapp and his mother were healed in Christian Science and through this healing the entire family became interested. He has served First Church of Christ, Scientist, Needham, Mass., as reader, director and president. He is on the teaching faculty of Mechanics Arts (Technical) High school in Boston.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

In all Christian Sciences churches, a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, June 12, on the subject "God the Preserver of Man."

The Golden Text will be: "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it" (Isaiah 31:5). Bible selections will include the following passage from Luke 5:12, 13: "And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leprosy: who seeing Jesus fell on his face and besought him, saying Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will: be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from ihm."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook will also be included, which reads: "Mortals obtain the harmony of health, only as they forsake discord, acknowledge the supremacy of divine Mind, and abandon their material beliefs. . . The action of so-called mortal mind must be destroyed by the divine Mind to bring out the harmony of being" (p. 400).

Money-Saving "Expo" Tickets Will Be Available

Details of a plan under which residents of this district may reserve reduced-rate Golden Gate International Exposition tickets by making partial payments any time before June 18 were announced today by Frank Mitchell of San Jose, chairman of the ticket sales campaign for Santa Clara county.

Under the plan, buyers will have until October 1 to finish paying for their tickets, Mr. Mitchell said.

"Those who desire to purchase the money-saving tickets, which will be available only through June 18, and who do not want to pay the whole amount immediately will be issued credit certificates," Mr. Mitchell said.

"To my way of thinking, hot water should come a-running from a pipe when silken dainties are due for washing, when the family dog is to be soaped and scrubbed, or a little boy's hands need whitening up, or a little girl's hair is to be shampooed to silky softness." signed TOMMY TEAKETTLE

NERVOUS
Quivering nerves can make you old and haggard looking, cranky and hard to live with—can keep you awake nights and rob you of good health, good times and jobs.
What you should try is a particularly good woman's tonic—and could you ask for anything whose benefits are better proved than that world-famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? Let its wholesome herbs and roots help Nature calm your shrieking nerves, tone up your system, give more energy and make life worth living again.
More than a million women have reported benefit—why not let Pinkham's Compound help YOU, too, to go "smiling thru" trying times like it has other grateful women for the past 3 generations? IT MUST BE GOOD!
